

Story idea

A boy falls into a hole... STOP IIIT and slows his decent while in the air before he hits literal rock bottom

At first he thinks he died which would either mean he was either in hell or heaven

So he looked around if anyone was in that place because heaven would know that he doesn't like being alone

He didn't want to think he was alone, he didn't want to think he was in hell

It got darker than before

He looked behind him and saw the hole he got in from closed off

The shining of the sun was no more

He could see light coming from somewhere else

He remembered there were vines in front of him so he meant to push them away but that made a very loud sound of many vines being crushed

He straightened up like a stop sign on the road and froze

He has giant ghost fingers that nobody can't see, they can phase through things until he wants to touch or move or attack something in the distance

He doesn't know how to control how far his fingers go without looking at the object

Which is why he was slowed down, he thought he was going to hit the ground with his hands but his giant fingers hit against the floor and slowed him down

He also needs to learn how to turn his entire body into a giant ghost and how to control it

In the gigantic cave there is air that has a mystical substance that gives people in it their own abilities, if they leave the place they'll lose that ability

The holes that open and close in random parts of the world is letting that air out and they need to find a way to stop that from happening or the air that gives people powers will spread out in the larger area of the Earth making it so slim nobody will ever get an ability again

Someone wants it to happen though because they believe that they can multiply that substance in the over world and give humans magical abilities because they think it would be smart to give back the gods their abilities

When in reality Humans compared to the worst of what was in the under ground are far worse

They only opened the hole to let one random human to get in for them to judge from the shadows if humans are kind enough to be gifted

Since he would want to be a super hero since he's a child and thinks that this is going to be an awesome adventure they thought all humans were this way

The kid would decide to help them to ultimately betray them after learning HOW they were planning to multiply the substance

Not because they were using human flesh or going to kill him but instead to take that machine and bring it back to the place where it all began so that he would bring back more power to the underground then there could've ever been and close off the exits through sheer force from every person in the cave

So they would be stuck in the over world to realize how big of a doofus everyone was

And since it was the internet age not that many people would believe that “Aliens” or “humanoid creatures” were actually real but instead either amazingly good suits or crazy cgi

Since there weren't that many of them anyway it wouldn't be like the entire world would see them

Unluckily enough some scientists would find out about the substance and want to experiment with it but until they got enough to give a person an ability that has influence on something more than an atom it would take a few hundred years so... no biggie

At least that would be the case if some people living in the caves started to become a part of the cult that supports and phrases the people who had that goal and questioned if the hero was as heroic as he truly was

Every time he'd train and get to another level he'd make an imprint of his new ghost body on a mountain to remember his progress

First fingers, then hands, then arms

Until an entire body would be imprinted on the other side of the mountain like he was trying to lift it or hug it

Also he'd use his ghost body to “float” by pressing his ghost self with his fingers

He'd make finger legs move forward with his actual fingers and imagine pressing the giant fingers on the actual ground which would lift him up if he moved his real hand downwards

Also he was freaking out with joy and screaming a lot the first time he realized he could fling himself around like he was flying around by pretty much walking on all five of his fingers

Kind of like a monkey

But they use their hands not ghost fingers

He could jump really high if he did the hand motion as if he was pushing down a basket ball but instead doing it on the floor

He could also climb on surfaces with his ghost hands even if it looked like he floated around while wiggling around his hands

Even if the imprint of his hands would show if he really tried climbing on stuff

I came up with this after only watching the first few minutes of Jacksepticeye's game play of Undertail

I've never watched the full game and after only seeing up to the part where a frog gets attacked before complimented I already got distracted in my thoughts and stopped

I still don't think this is enough, just one character and one power and one plot point isn't interesting

I think a creature made out of wolf heads could train him how to stop being so merciful towards people and teach him that sometimes he just needs to stop caring about their well being because they won't care about his and take advantage of his nature